(Copyright, 1935, by The Associated Press.)FLEMINGTON, N. J., Jan. 14.— Bruno Richard Hauptmann today was identified by a surprise witness as a man who shadowed Dr. John F. (Jafsie) Condon in the Bronx
prior to the payment of $50,000
Lindbergh ransom.The witness was Miss Hildegarde Glea Alexander, a resident of the Bronx. She said she saw Hauptmann watching Dr. Condon in a telegram office in the waiting room of the Fordham station of the New York Central railroad.

Sets The Time

She fixed the time as sometime between the time that she learned Dr. Condon was the ransom intermediary and the time it was announced the money had been paid."Who else was in this station besides you and Dr. Condon?" a prosecutor asked her."I saw a man looking at Dr. Condon," she said.She explained the man was 10 to 15 feet away, and said she saw him again a few evenings later. "Was there anybody else in the station besides Dr. Condon and this man and yourself?""There may have been but I didn't notice anyone particularly.""Who was the man you saw in that station watching Dr. Condon on this night in March and whom you saw a few nights afterwards walking down Fordham rd?""I saw the man was Bruno Richard Hauptmann!"Hauptmann turned a slight red.
His wife sitting nearby paled.
Miss Alexander said she was 26 years old and described herself as a salesgirl and dress model. She made a chic appearance on the stand.

Attention Attracted

She testified her attention was attracted to the man she identified as Hauptmann in the telephone office by "the fact he was very obviously watching him (Dr. Condon), very significantly."When Edward J. Reilly, chief of defense counsel, cross-examined her she slightly embarrassed the state by testifying she had no recollection of the night she saw Hauptmann and Dr. Condon. When the question was asked Attorney General David T. Wilentz offered to furnish the name of the escort to the defense."The state would have furnished us with the name of a non existent fictitious person," Reilly complained. Wilentz said he had been misinformed.Reilly questioned her closely on the railroad lines running through the Bronx and defended his right to inquire along this line with the assertion:"I want to prove that she was never there and that she doesn't know the lines that run through there, although she has lived in the Bronx all her life."

Defense Surprised

Miss Alexander's testimony took the defense by surprise after Albert
S. Osborn, Jr., a handwriting expert, had testified that the hand-

Nazis Victors In Saar Voting

Official Count Begins This Afternoon, But Result Is Known

By MELVIN K. WHITELEATHER

(Copyright, 1935, by The Associated Press.)

SAARBRUECKEN, Saar Basin Territory, Jan. 14.— Anti-Nazis virtually conceded today they had been defeated in the long-awaited Saar plebiscite and that the residents of this wealthy little territory had voted to restore it to the Fatherland.With machine guns for watchdogs, 860 tall ballot boxes were stored in Wartburg auditorium to await the count at 5 p. m.Ninety-eight per cent of the eligible voters of the basin cast ballots
yesterday in the plebiscite awaited
15 years, to determine whether the Saar should return to Germany,
go to France, or remain under the League of Nations
control.The league's Saar governing commission will make a final decision, taking into consideration the results of the vote.Concession that the Hitlerites
had been overwhelmingly victorious was seen in a statement issued by Max Braun, leader of the "Common Front" anti-Nazi organization, who claimed voters were being subjected to duress.Describing the vote as "the worst pseudo-Democratic election ever held outside of Germany's farces," Braun said responsible quarters had "failed miserably to live up to their guarantees for a free election," and arraigned Red Cross nurses who aided invalids in marking their ballots as "tools of Hitler.""The impression was created," he declared, "that the Saar already is under Nazi rule."The voices of the Saarlanders raised in partisan shouts throughout the territory during the pre-plebiscite campaign, were strangely quiet yesterday. Voters seemed afraid to talk above a whisper as they approached the polling places. Calm prevailed and there were few disqualifications.The counting of the ballots will take all night, and the result is expected to be flashed to the world some time early tomorrow.The plebiscite commission delayed sorting the ballots in accordance with the wishes of the police and international army which desired that the results be announced in day-time when demonstrations can be more easily handled.The cortege of green boxes holding the secret of the plebiscite dramatically moved
across the territory during the night under heavy
guard.Four special trains with fixed
schedules converged on Saarbruecken. The boxes were loaded into boxcars at various key points and were transferred from the railroad station here to Wartburg in army trucks upon which were mounted machine guns.The plebiscite officials who watched the sealing of the boxes accompanied them on the same train in attached coaches, which also conveyed troops.Officials decided the seals of the boxes would be broken at 5 p. m. in the presence of representatives of the French and German governments and the Saar Nazis and anti-Nazis. The 140 tellers were forbidden

All the checks were drawn on that Hovermale.The state highway patrol broadcast an account of the holdup and descriptions of the men immediately. One of the men was described as 35 years old, five feet nine inches in height, had a smooth face and wore a dark overcoat. The other was describ-ly taller and weighing around 135 pounds. He was light complexion-

a light grey overcoat and a black of near Signal is in the village jail awaiting action by authorities after an automobile collision in which his car is said to have struck that driven by Frank Chetwin of East Liverpool, east of Lisbon.Chetwin's car was knocked over an embankment into the old cannal ditch. Kenneth Watkins and Theda Hale of East Liverpool, were passengers in Chetwin's car. None burglary and larceny, according to records.Prince, Daughter Of Former Ruler,

Alfonso, Are Wed

(By Associated Press.)

ROME, Jan. 14.—Prince Alessandro Torlonia, son of the former Elsie Moore of New York, and Infanta Beatriz of Spain, daughter of the former King Alfonso, were married today in Rome's magnificent Old Church of Jesus.They were surrounded by the scions of Europe's "royalst" royal families. Hundreds of persons jammed adjacent streets to catch a glimpse of the bride but she entered the church by a rear door.The wedding was performed by Cardinal Pedro Segura, exiled cardinal primate of Spain. First among the guests in the royal pews
were King Victor Emmanuel III of Italy, Queen Elena and the Princesses of the House of Savoy.Former King Alfonso of Spain headed the princes of the blood of the Bourbon family who gathered to see their young relative wed.
Other royal houses represented were those of Bavaria, Orleans de Braganza, Greece, and the French Bourbon branch, with a sprinkling of Hapsburgs.According to the Italian custom the bride was escorted to the altar
by her two witnesses. Her father, and sister Infanta Maria Cristina were in the wedding procession with the Duke of Covadonga, former Prince of Asturias, and the Infante Don Jaime. The bride's witnesses were the Infante Juan, youngest son of Alfonso who became heir apparent through the renunciation to throne rights of his two elder brothers, and Don Carlos Bourbon, brother-in-law of Alfonso.Prince Albani Ludovico Chigi, grand master of the Sovereign Order of Malta, and the Duke of Torlonia acted for Prince Alessandro.

both of Middletown, Ky., were returned here from Newport, Ky., to-

with the robbery Dec. 5 of the Paul

Polish Up Arithmetic As Sales Tax Looms

Housewives Will Do Some Sharp Figuring to Save Extra Pennies

(By Associated Press.)

COLUMBUS, Jan. 14.—Housewives soon may be buying their groceries in big lots to save money under the 3 per cent sales tax law.Tentative regulations announced by the state tax commission showed today that many a penny can be saved by buying for instance, seven 10-cent cans of pork and beans together rather than one at a time over a period.The tax on the 70-cent sale would be 2 cents, whereas if the beans were bought a can at a time, the seven cents would require 7 cents
tax.

No "Punch Cards"

The tax commission dashed the hopes of some purchasers that they would be permitted to buy "punch cards" or transfer slips entitling
them to so much in merchandise, deposit the tax based on the total price, then use the cards to make numerous individual purchases."In no case," the regulations say,
"will it be permissible to use what are commonly called transfer slips
or 'punch cards.'"

The "punch cards" were proposed to obviate paying a one-cent or 10 per cent tax on a 10-cent item.The ruling holding that the tax shall be based on the total price of a number of items, however, somewhat removes what has been termed the inequality of the tax when applied to small cost items. The regulations stipulate, though, that the several items must be paid for in a lump sum, thus constituting a single transaction.If a purchaser went from counter to counter in a 5-and-10 store and paid for each item as he selected it, he would have to pay the tax on each item.Purchases of 8 cents or less are exempt from the tax. The tax is one cent on purchases of more than 8 cents and not more than 40 cents;

2 cents on purchases of more than 40 cents and not more than 70 cents, and 3 cents on purchases more than 70 cents and not more than $1.There is a tax of three cents on each full dollar thereafter.

Each Deal Taxable

The principle is that each transaction is subject to the tax, and a transaction as defined by the taxcommission is consummated when the money is paid in a charge placed on a credit account.The tax would not be assessed against the full amount of an account at the end of the month, but on each transaction. For instance, if a batch of groceries were ordered at one time, the tax would be against their aggregate price. However, if 10 minutes later a housewife should order another item, the tax would apply on that purchase, which could not be combined with the previous order.Other high spots of the regulations follow:Sales of bread in loaf form are not subject to the tax. This exemption does not apply to rolls, buns or pastries, but it does apply to the sales of sliced bread when sold in loaf form.Sales of fluid milk for consumption off the premises of the vendor are not taxable. Condensed milk and similar products are not subject to the tax.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 14.—Amelia Earhart Putnam held her air-minded public somewhat in the air today as far as her immediate flying plans were concerned.America's "first lady" of the air, travel weary from her epochal solo flight across the Pacific on the lonely Honolulu-to-California
stretch and her leisurely jaunt down the coastline from Oakland to Los Angeles yesterday, made this much known:

She was "tired."

She wanted to take off for Washington, D. C.She directed her ocean-spanning

She wanted to sleep.

That was the last heard of the tousled-headed aviatrix late last night when she left the Union air-terminal at Burbank, forced because of bad weather, reports to cancel for the time being, at least, her trip to the nation's capital.Airport officials poured gasoline into the plane's tanks, serviced it completely, and awaited either

the field or further directions.Lands In Jail After Pappas made to police, who were

DAVEY SWORN IN,
PLEDGES COMMON
SENSE GOVERNMENTThousands Gather On West Lawn of the Old State House, Braving Chill Winds and Snow Flurries to Witness Ceremonies

FAMILY OF GOVERNOR IS PRESENT

New Chief Proposes Crime Bureau, Advises
Continuation of State Pay Cuts; Says Pardons, Paroles Not For Sale

(By Associated Press.)

COLUMBUS, O. Jan. 14.—Martin L. Davey, taking office as Ohio's 49th governor, today promised a two-year administration in which "common sense" will be applied to problems of the state.He will not resort to "brain trusts" or become a slave to precedent, he said.

Advises Common Sense

Declaring that most problems
"can be solved by application of common sense," the new chief executive said in his inaugural address that "fanciful and impractical theories are all right for those who live in the protected cloisters of academic environment, who are not subject to the hard struggles of life or who do not have to wrestle with the difficult problems of meeting continuing payrolls."But on the other hand, the governor said that "government ought not to be a slave to precedent and this one will not be."Adaptations, he said, must be made to changing conditions
"without casting aside the anchors
of the past that are worth preserving."While advocating a balanced budget for ordinary governmental expenditures, the governor said this may not be possible for the financing of relief, old age pensions,
schools and political subdivisions.
As an aid in balancing the ordinary budget, he recommended continuation temporarily of the salary reductions of state employees.

Can't Complain

"There are a vast number who have had to endure much more drastic salary cuts in private life," he said. "No state employee can fairly complain, if he will compare his own status with the majority of private citizens."Admitting the possibility that present tax revenues may be insufficient to meet all needs, he insisted there must be an absolute necessity for them before he will sanction their levy. "There must be no unnecessary taxes of any kind whatsoever," he declared. If yields from present tax levies are too great, he said, they must be reduced but, if too small, "then—and then only—is time to think of new ones."Proposing an independent state bureau to cope with crime, Governor Davey said, "we propose to accept the challenge of the underworld and use all the power of the state to crush organized gangsters and racketeers." He also asserted that "no pardons or paroles are
for sale."

Bribers Become Busy

"No sooner had the name of the new executive secretary been announced," he continued, "than he was approached by offers of money to help secure the release of convicted persons.""I want to serve a friendly notice on every one that no pardons or paroles are for sale. No convicted person will be released except upon the strict merit of his own case. Not even political influence will count.""I propose to use this power with scrupulous regard for the ethics of the law and in the interest of society. Henceforth anyone who approaches with offers of money will do so at his own peril, and I should like to see him arrested."

"EVERYTHING IS OK"

Mrs. Amelia Earhart Putnam, who gave up a safe career teaching school to become America's first lady of the air, conquered the two most formidable frontiers of aviation. To her solo flight across the north Atlantic ocean she has added a solo flight from the Hawaiian Islands to California.

She spanned the Atlantic with less excitement in May, 1932, than many Americans show when taking a day's ride in their automobiles. It was the second time such a flight had been made by an individual flying alone. It was, of course, the first time a woman had made the flight alone.

It was soon evident when Mrs. Putnam arrived in the Hawaiian Islands a few weeks ago that she was contemplating a flight to the United States. No person ever had made such a flight alone. The Pacific contains the bodies of many who have tried to do it. Mrs. Putnam had set for herself one of the hardest tests in long-distance flying.

Before she left, early Saturday morning, she remarked that the most important thing in flying was preparation. Apparently, she felt secure in her plane and in herself. For anxious hours while the country waited for word she had landed somewhere in California she repeated this assurance in messages stating "Everything is OK."

Yes, everything is OK, particularly for those timid persons who used to be afraid women were held in their kitchens and over their washbasins and ironing boards by chains too strong to break. Mrs. Amelia Earhart Putnam, all things considered, has been doing pretty well as a pace-setter in this emancipation business. Right now she seems to be "the top" in the flying business, men included.

Asked in New York City about revolt down Louisiana way, Sen. Huey Long chortled, explaining his enemies always were organizing to do him harm but never had enough gumption to go through with anything.

Revolt is in the Louisiana air; there's no denying it. A great many people who don't like the senator are jumping at conclusions. Because they want to believe he will come to grief, they are imagining all sorts of tragedies with the Kingfish as victim.

Caution discourages too much expectancy. One thing is conspicuously lacking in news of the march on Baton Rouge. Maybe the omission is inadvertent. It might indicate a void, however, in the one place which Sen. Long will be needing to watch most carefully.

Are women behind the anti-Long revolt in Louisiana? Have housewives, stenographers, lady school-teachers, factory girls and social leaders taken up their embroidery scissors, paper clips, rulers and tea-cups against the great man? This is what the north needs to know before it can estimate the Louisiana temper.

Huey Long has demonstrated beyond doubt that he can handle the men. They growl in their throats and throw their arms about occasionally, but they never get anywhere. Too many of them, apparently, either are beholden to him for a living or are thinking of joining up with his outfit if they can't do better for themselves some other place.

If it's going to be done, women will have to do it. So until there is a feminine siren loud enough to ring from the bayous to the wooded hills in the Western Reserve, news of revolt against Kingfish Long will have to be treated like sea monster stories from Loch Ness. Please pass the salt.

O. O. MCINTYRE
NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

NEW YORK, Jan. 14—Diary: Out in a cutting wind and saw Roy Howard and his editor Lee Wood bowling by. So to one of those clattery places for breakfast and the serving maid as pretty as Carole Lombard. Then to sit a moment with Floyd Gibbons, who was off for St. Paul or somewhere.

Picking out an essay and with my wife and Lucy Virginia Long to see a private run of film with the Deac Aylesworths. And on to Karl and Gladys Kitchen's where everybody merry. And a man I took to be Wesley B. Stout turned out to be a fellow named Kesley C. Rout, which tickled me mightily.

To dinner with the Fullerton Weavers and heard that "Camera Eye" Sheridan, the veteran detective, had passed away. He was a colorful figure in the reporting days of Cobb, O'Malley, Terhune and Ed Hill. Home early and before a great fire finished a biography of Keats.

Raymond Hitchcock was leading a retreat to Old Chelsea just before he died. But no one carried on where he left off. In many ways Chelsea is about the only district not entirely absorbed by the moderns. There are still a number of venerable bricks, with white lintels and green shutters, sitting gloomily back in deep yards. Also lace curtains, window canaries and coiling cats on the sills.

The collapse of New York's skyscraper boom is blamed directly for the passing of five distinguished citizens. All casualties were among those whose great edifices were finished just before or shortly after the crash. The blow was too much and they sickened and died. Conspicuous in the list was Pierre, the hotel man, whose dream since days of Monte Carlo chausseur-ship was of a giant inn bearing his name. Just as his dream was realized the fury of the storm not only swept him into bankruptcy, but broke his heart.

Personal nomination for the drollest tomfoolery on the current stage—that of Percy Kilbride in "The Post Road."

Henry L. Mencken's once weekly visits to New York are becoming increasingly seldom. Those who knew say his happy marriage has thoroughly domesticated him and the world outside Baltimore has little appeal. When he does travel he and his wife go on a typical tourist cruise with the Babbitts for several weeks. His alleged tiff with Nathan has brought about the most widely discussed literary breach in this generation. They were the stoutest of boon companions, dining, beer and turning out essays together. All the overtures to bring them together meet indifference. Mencken at least has settled down for a long bout.

Upper Madison is to have a parfumer for men. A gilded shop will have a stock of scents suitable only for the gentleman's kerchief and a sideline of barber lotions of sundry aromas. Thousands of New York men like a dash of perfume but will not go to the usual perfume stores for it, and so they swipe sprays from wives and sisters. So the experiment may fill a need.

Sean O'Casey, the dashing Irish playwright, clouded his first visit to America by giving the impression he could not take it. He was in a swollen rage over several adverse comments. Although the general comment was favorable for his play, there was a dissenting flaw-picker here and there. And O'Casey, in fine Irish temper, appeared at luncheons and sundry dinners, venting his contempt.

Bagatelles: Fred Astaire is now a $1,750 a week movie star. Irving Kaye Davis is regarded as Broadway's most persistent playwright. Charles MacArthur's idea of relaxation is to turn out a magazine yarn. Deslys and Clark are said to be the thirteenth of the cafe singers. Elmer Rice is said to have dropped a half million sponsoring his own plays this season. When Oscar of the Waldorf has an evening off he goes to banquets. Charles Wininger always goes without food the day of a premiere.

With the great Otto Kahn mansion turned into a private school, almost the last of imposing mansions along what was once the avenue's Millionaire Row have changed fronts or gone down. Only the Frick castle seems impregnable. Mrs. Kahn has withdrawn to the seclusion of a comparatively small apartment in Sutton Place. While the Kahn fortune—as whose wasn't?—was reduced she is still rich. Her interests have never centered on the Four Hundred but rather in the encouragement of writers and artists. Her husband was a persistent first nighter. She attended but one a year—at the Metropolitan.

Genevieve Cooper has finally discovered just what a table d'hôte is, after exhaustive research. It's a place where for 85 cents they serve you not quite enough of a lot of things you don't want.

THE STARS SAY

For Tuesday, January 15

Unusual activity and possibly commotion is forecast from the predominant planetary influences. This applies to business as well as to all manner of social, cultural, domestic and romantic affiliations. It would be well to deal with writers, publishers and promotional agencies. Be cautious in employment and in making minor changes.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a particularly happy and active year, in business as well as in all private relations. There may be much gratification and pleasure in the home circle or affectional ties. In all pertaining to writings, publicity, publishing and promotion there are excellent auguries. In employment be careful to guard against petty annoyances.

Sore Throat, Common Winter Ill

THIS is the time of the year when victims of diseased and enlarged tonsils are subject to repeated attacks of tonsillitis. These persons are especially susceptible to "quinsy" sore throat.

This is a painful infection of the tonsil. It is really an abscess formation in the diseased tonsil or in the tissues adjacent to the tonsil.

The sufferer complains of considerable pain and swelling on one side of the throat. This persists for several days. As the soreness grows more intense, talking and swallowing becomes extremely difficult.

Very often the mouth can be opened just partially and even this is painfully accomplished. The breath has a very unpleasant odor. Although there is no actual stiffness of the neck, the patient keeps turning his head in his efforts to assuage the pain.

The disturbance is often confused with some infection of the ear, because the sufferer complains of throbbing and pains in this organ, at this is "referred pain," apparently in the ear when it is actually due to the inflammation and swelling caused by the abscess in the throat. In severe cases high fever, headache and general discomfort are present.

As in the case of any other abscess within the body, the cure of quinsy sore throat depends on drainage of the accumulated pus. Naturally, most persons dread operation even though it is a simple one. Hoping to escape it, they resort to remedies for the relief of pain or wait till there is spontaneous rupture of the abscess.

The pain disappears as soon as the abscess ruptures, but unfortunately the infection is still present and sooner or later the symptoms return. Repeated attacks will occur unless the abscess is properly lanced and drained.

Should Not Be Neglected
When the abscess is superficial, simple lancing is sufficient to drain

By FREDERICK WILLS,
International Illustrated News Writer

DETROIT—Optimism reigns for 1935 in the automobile business, one of the nation's leading industries, often scrutinized as a barometer of better times.

There is no feeling current among auto manufacturers that the year will be the best in history. By the same token, there is no feeling current that it will be the worst business year.

But the attitude prevails that it will be a good year in sales. The optimism is based on both logic and statistics.

Progress in 1934
First and foremost, auto makers look for improved conditions on the basis of progress made in 1934. Of the past year, one prominent manufacturer had this to say:

"If there is any single fact more gratifying and more encouraging than all others to leaders in the motor industry, it is that automotive production and sales records for 1934 revealed unmistakable recovery progress."

During the year, production increased 45 per cent over 1933 and was approximately double the number of vehicles produced in 1932. The total output for 1934 was estimated at 2,885,000 units, representing a wholesale value of $1,453,800,000.

Interesting in this connection is the fact that truck sales showed a greater increase for the year than did those of the passenger field. This output, more than twice that of 1932, has been traced to the stimulation of general business activity and the improvement in construction industries due to the projects launched by the public works administration and private industries.

Cars Junked
Looking back into the past year, manufacturers find another bit of logic to support their forecasts for a bright 1935. That is in the relative number of cars junked and the number of cars distributed to users.

According to registration figures, there were more cars junked and otherwise removed permanently from service during the year than were absorbed by the domestic market. This would tend to indicate that the owners of the junked cars will need replacements, providing the economic situation permits it.

At the same time, however, figures revealed that there were nearly 1,000,000 more vehicles operated in 1934 than in 1933. This appears to be paradoxical, but manufacturers have an explanation for it. They contend that 1934 saw a large number of automobiles re-entered into service which had been forced into temporary storage, as a result of the depression.

And even this circumstance looks good to the makers. Their theory is that with these cars again operating they are therefore in the process of being worn out, bringing closer and closer the day of replacement.

Foreign Sales

Another important factor in the outlook for 1935 is the possibility for an improved demand for American-made automobiles abroad. In 1934 the demand increased and export leaders believe that the signing of new reciprocal trade agreements with three countries will assure a greater potential market abroad in 1935.

Motor manufacturers like to believe that their industry and its allied groups have contributed more to the economic rehabilitation than any other industry. Whether or not this can be said to be true, it must be admitted that the $2,216,477,000 received for the 1934 production of new vehicles, tires, parts and accessories did much to stimulate the many channels of business upon which the auto industry depends for materials.

The automobile, it is said, was the largest single market for many lines of industry, including gasoline, rubber, steel, malleable iron, mohair, upholstery leather, plate glass, lubricating oil, nickel and lead. Besides those branches, it gave considerable business to copper, hardwood lumber, aluminum, cotton and other industries.

YOU'LL GET

"BEACH BEAUTY" by ARTHUR SHUMWAY

CHAPTER XLIII

When Kay arrived at the Long Island house Ida was there. Ida looked smoother, more sophisticated than ever. She was wearing a jaunty Parisian sports suit of rich brown mixture and a cocky little hat worn with an arrogant unconcern. Evidently Harrow had prepared her for the meeting, because she came forward to greet Kay without surprise.

"Kay—darling," she said. "I'm so glad to see you."

"Ida, I was delighted to hear you were coming. And you look stunning."

"Kay—I think it's grand. I can't tell you how glad I am."

Kay must have looked the question, for Ida added: "The show Earl's doing for you. I think it's absolutely marvelous."

"It is," Kay admitted. "I hardly can believe it yet."

"Well, it's tangible enough," Harrow put in, smiling shrewdly at the two girls. "Spoke can tell you that."

Spoke sighed. "And how!" he said. "But we're going to wow them."

"Kay, I think your playwright is darling," Ida gushed. "Of all people, Boris Warren!"

"Ida met Boris in Majorca," Harrow explained.

"Did you?" Kay inquired.

"Yes," the perfect bohemian, Ida said enthusiastically. "I don't see how you can keep from falling in love with him."

Kay managed to catch the almost imperceptible flash of amusement that crossed Harrow's eyes. And she was enjoying her own amusement at Ida. The girl hadn't changed in the least. Still a subtle maneuverer yet not quite subtle enough.

"Ida's promised to be with us a while, Kay," Harrow said. "She's going to Paris, but she's decided to wait until our show is ready."

"My dear," Ida exclaimed. "I wouldn't miss it for the world!"

That was true enough, Kay thought.

There was a party that night Harrow insisted it be in the house rather than in town so that unwelcome publicity and the attentions of Nick Caspar's men might be avoided. Ben Leschin was there, Boris, Spike, Ralph Prentiss, the critic, and a few actors and actresses from the casts of Harrow's forthcoming productions. This last group to Kay's surprise, included the handsome Phil Dunn, star of "Regret Me Not," Harrow noting Kay's amusement, explained that situation to her.

"Phil's going to carry that show for me," he said, "and I'm having to keep him sweet. He's not so bad anyway even if he does happen to have one of the three or four biggest heads on Broadway. This week he'll keep his mouth shut while he happens and what's going on. Otherwise—no matter how much he might be warned—he'd be capable of gossiping like an old biddy. You're supposed to be nice to him, no more. He may make a pass or two at you, but I doubt it. I think tonight he's going to gather that you're a pretty personal connection of my own."

Kay looked curiously at Harrow. He began to smile.

"Well, that was the agreement, wasn't it? Ralph Prentiss is a newspaperman, but a discreet chap. He'll talk a little, but in the right way. Phil Dunn may talk—Lord knows how—but it'll serve. And, bit by bit, the backstage romance angle that Spike wants to put over will be built up without too much obvious pressure and without what might prove to be a fatal haste. We'll just let people guess and wonder on their own hook."

"It ought to be fun," Kay said.

"It is fun—for me," he replied, looking at her significantly.

"And, as Spike so aptly put it the other day, it's 'no hardship' for me."

"Good girl!" Harrow declared warmly. He leaned over and whispered: "I do love you tremendously, Kay."

Kay smiled at him intimately. Looking over the party Kay prophesied that several things would happen and she soon had proof of her augury. One was that Harrow would make more insistent love to her; another was that Boris Warren would keep very close to her with the same purpose; a third was that Phil Dunn would indeed make flirtation "passes" at her; and the last was that Ida Campbell would resume her old game of trying to appropriate Harrow for herself.

Bit by bit, it all began to happen. The first was Phil Dunn. He danced with her, then drew her to a secluded divan. Looking at her admiringly—and being sure that she was seeing the better side of his own profile—he said: "You are lovely, aren't you?"

"You think so?"

"I know it. And you know it, too, or I'm very wrong. The other day in the theater—well, I'm awfully sorry. I merely thought—and I hesitated, not quite sure what to say."

Kay helped him. "That I was open to conviction?"

"That's excellent. I suppose so, yes. But I'm very sorry, Kay. I know how wrong I was and you may find my apology."

"It's perfectly all right, thank you."

His hand reached over and took one of hers. "Then, let's consider that something which happened to us."

Two other people—and we'll begin from here. Shall we? He raised her hand and gently put the fingers to his lips.

Spike appeared. "Beg pardon," he said. "Like to dance, Kay?"

"I'd love it."

Dunn rose reluctantly and smiled with forced politeness as he watched Spike whisk her away.

"I figured it was time for the white horse troops to gallop up," he observed.

"Thanks a whole lot, Spike. He annoys me."

"He annoys everybody but the su-reat public and that's the pity of it," Spike agreed.

Annoyed or not, Kay was enjoying the situation. She could hardly believe that a few weeks ago she was looking for work as a salesgirl at Daytona Beach. Her only regret was—here. Whenever she thought of him she began to hate herself.

Ida managed to spirit Harrow off somewhere and for the first time Kay found that the situation rather pleased than annoyed her. At this stage there was nothing that could mean anything between her and Harrow and, if Ida managed to keep him busy for a few days, it would relieve her of the responsibility of making a decision.

At least, that was what she thought until she wandered outside with Boris Warren and happened to catch a glimpse of Ida in Harrow's arms. Instantly, the whole situation seemed changed. Much as she hated to admit it, Kay felt a fierce resentment and a burning ache that might even have been jealousy. She told herself that what she really resented was Harrow's instability. If he loved her as he said he did, how could he be trifling with Ida? Everything in Kay's life at this moment depended upon Harrow's trustworthiness and if he failed her in one thing, why might he not fail her in another?

Somehow, she felt a strange impulse to hurt the man.

"Boris," she said, "let's sit down on that bench."

"Certainly," the playwright agreed.

They sat down on a stone bench within easy sight of Harrow, who was not fifty feet away with Ida.

Kay looked strangely at Boris. "I've been thinking about what you told me," she said.

"Yes?" His voice was as deep, as calm as ever.

"I'm going to be true to Kay Owen for at least this moment. You said I owed nothing to anyone else."

Boris nodded.

"Then suppose you kiss me."

He did. His long arms gathered her up and drew her close to him and his great blond head bent down, his lips touched her, at first lightly, then with a force, a pressure, that was actually painful, and she could feel the roughness of the unruly Tartar mustache upon her sensitive skin. Never in her life had anyone kissed her in quite the same way.

When finally she managed to draw away from his grasp, she managed to whisper: "I got what I asked for."

And once again Boris gave her that slow, sad, solemn nod. He said nothing, but sat there with his deep-set eyes upon her, wise, mysterious, and strong.

Then Kay remembered Harrow and Ida. She was surprised to find that in Boris' embrace she had forgotten them both. This was dangerous. She rose quickly.

"And this weekend?" Boris asked softly.

"I can't tell you, Boris," she said. "I—I don't know."

When they went back into the house a servant approached Kay anxiously.

"Telephone, Miss Owen."

"Excuse me, Boris." She hurried, wondering whom it could be.

She lifted the handset receiver. "This is Miss Owen."

"Kay?" The voice was Pete's!

"Pete?"

"Yes." There was a pause.

"Kay, I'm in trouble. I've had an accident. Can you come?"

"Of course, Pete. Is it—"

He cut her off. "Take this address quickly—and don't tell anyone."

Kay dropped the telephone back in its cradle and looked quickly about her. There was only one thing to do; to slip out and take one of the cars without announcing her intention, for Harrow or Spike would be sure to insist on going with her or at least on sending one of the guards.

And, although it was a crisp autumn night, she would have to go without a wrap lest she attract suspicion. She stole out a side door and looked back to see if anyone had noticed her. Evidently none had.

She hurried to the garage, but saw that it was lighted within and realized that the home and visiting chauffeurs might be gathered in conference. Her wits acted quickly. Seeing a small coupe parked in the drive she ran to it, and tried the door. It was unlocked.

And the dash light showed that the key was in its slot. Looking around cautiously, she slipped into the car and started the motor. Then, as quietly as possible, she backed, turned and started down the drive. Once on the road outside she drew a deep breath and stepped on the accelerator pedal.

It was a pitch black night without so much as a star and, even though she had traveled it with Harrow, the road was unfamiliar to her, but still she shot the swift lithe coupe around the curves and over the straightaways with the cold courage of a race driver.

Pete in trouble, an accident, and he wanted her. She could not imagine what had happened or why he had insisted upon secrecy. All she had heard from him over the telephone was the brief, anxious plea to come to him at once. But she could not forget the tone of suspense, the broad hint of pain, in his unmistakably familiar voice.

Whatever it was, she was doing all she could make up at last for such slight as she might have given him. During this anxious and seemingly interminable stretch of time while the car screamed around the curves and whined past slower vehicles, she knew one thing with a surprising clarity, and that was that at the moment Pete was all that mattered to her. Her career, her safety, Harrow, Boris—nothing was so important as Pete's welfare.

Garnishes For Meat Dishes

ACCESSORIES AND garnishes will help to glorify the meat course and make it go further. Get away from the wilted lettuce leaf or the dark piece of parsley that was once considered quite the thing to serve with the meat course. Give the family garnishes that can and will be eaten and so turn an ordinary meal into a feast.

Bananas Are Popular
Bananas are fast coming into their own as a simply swell and healthful accompaniment to meat. The chewy meat is glorified by the creamy flavor of the banana and it means additional vitamins, too. For the steak or with the cold cuts, why not serve spiced logs and carry the undying gratitude of the family. Boil three-quarters of a cup of vinegar, two-thirds of a cup of sugar, 24 whole cloves and a small stick of cinnamon until the sugar is dissolved and the bubbles begin to look thick. Peel three bananas, drop them in the hot syrup and boil hard for two minutes. Then remove from the fire and cool. Bananas may be cut into smaller pieces if desired. Delicious with broiled steak or chops.

Jelly Garnish
To serve with roast chicken or fowl there is a new and toothsome red and white garnish that is a real beautifier as well. Cut currant, or other red colored jelly into cubes. Peel ripe bananas, slice lengthwise, then cut into short sections. Put a cube or two of jelly on each banana strip. Arrange around the roast or edge of platter when ready to serve. Or, turn out a can of strained cranberry sauce so that it retains its molded shape. Slice thin, then cut into small rounds with cookie cutter or inverted can. Slice ripe bananas, sprinkle lightly with fruit juice. Arrange alternate slices of the cranberry sauce and bananas around the edge of the platter.

Then there are bacon rolls to serve with cream chicken or with veal, or equally nice for a quick luncheon, with creamed chipped beef on toast. Roll half-lengths of peeled banana in strips of bacon. Secure in the "back" if necessary. Broil under flame or bake in dish in hot oven for about 15 minutes or until bananas are tender and the bacon crisp. Bake at least once during process of baking.

A Two-Fruit Garnish
Ham steak becomes a banquet when served with two-fruit garnish. Cut three slices of canned pineapple in halves. Arrange in shallow baking dish, and sprinkle with brown or granulated sugar. Bake in moderate oven ten minutes or until sugar is melted.

Excellent with duck or pork is apple-banana sauce. Pare two apples, peel four bananas and cut in small pieces. Add half cup water and one stick cinnamon and cook until soft. Remove cinnamon, press mixture through a sieve and add sugar to taste. Serve on small dishes or fill lettuce cups with mixture and place around duck or pork on platter.

Leetonia Plans President's Ball

LEETONIA, Jan. 14.—H. D. Arnold, chairman, and Leland Helt, assistant chairman for the President's birthday ball to be held on the evening of Jan. 30, have called a special meeting to be held at the mayor's office at 8 this evening.

The chairman requests that civic and fraternal organizations and service clubs in the village send representatives.

HUNTSVILLE, Tex.—Jabbo, the monkey inmate of the state prison, was in "stripes" today.

Jabbo made a "break" for freedom yesterday, clambered over the walls and made his getaway. They caught him a block away as he stopped to play with a dog.

On his return prisoners dressed him in "stripes"—the uniform used to designate recalcitrants and prisoners recaptured after escaping.

FROCKS for Late Winter

Gay and colorful and ideal for wear under the heavy coat

By MARIE MAROT

CREPE, SMOOTH or wrinkled, seems to be the favorite fabric for fine frocks, the type of thing that is worn under a luxury fur coat. Novelty crepes will be with us this spring again and we are promised some new weaves as well as the old stand-bys and the once-again popular matelasse crepe. Velvet trims many of the frocks shown for late winter wear and is used to give smart color accents and contrast. Here are three new frocks, all of them good. The big bow and cuffs on the first frock are of blue velvet to tone with the blue of the crepe frock. Rhinestone clasp and belt buckle add interest. The center frock is of a novelty matelasse crepe with a velvet ruffle and huge rhinestone clips. The strictly tailored frock is of black matelasse with a white moire front and odd cuffs.

A novelty matelasse crepe with a ruffle collar of velvet.

Frostings That Are Toasted

IN KEEPING with our policy of offering you new and often quite revolutionary ideas in the culinary world, we today present you with something new in the way of frostings. If you want to serve a real novelty and hear the "Ohs and ahs" of appreciation and delight just serve frostings that are toasted after they are put on. They look as tempting as they taste. The secret is that they are made with sweetened condensed milk as their basis, and they are failure proof. Try one the next time you want to serve a cake that will be remembered and talked about.

Coconut Icing

To make coconut broiled icing, combine one-half cup sweetened condensed milk; two tablespoons butter, melted; four tablespoons brown sugar and one cup shredded coconut. Blend all thoroughly. Spread on cake. Place very low on broiler under slow flame. Broil until icing bubbles all over and surface becomes light brown. Remove from broiler and cool before serving. To make baked fudge frosting, melt two squares unsweetened chocolate in double boiler. Add contents of one can (one and one-third cups) sweetened condensed milk, stir over boiling water five minutes until it thickens. Add one tablespoon water. Fold in half cup of coconut. Spread on cake. Sprinkle top with half cup coconut. Place in hot oven ten minutes or until coconut is brown.

To make a delectable toasted peanut frosting place contents of one can of sweetened condensed milk and two tablespoons peanut butter in top of double boiler. Cook over boiling water for five minutes or until mixture thickens, stirring until well blended. Add half cup chopped peanuts. Spread on cake. Decorate top with peanut halves. Bake in hot oven (450 F.) for ten minutes.

To make a toasted coconut frosting, place cake on a cookie sheet.

Hepburn Is Splendid As "Babbie" In Barrie's "Little Minister"

STARRING the brilliant Katharine Hepburn. Sir James M. Barrie's much loved romance, "The Little Minister," comes to the screen as a vibrant, actional and deeply moving love story. With the exception, perhaps, of her role in "Little Women," Miss Hepburn has never had a better opportunity to display her unusually splendid talents than she has as Barrie's "Babbie." The dashing, romantic gypsy girl, long enshrined in the hearts of readers, is perfect human material for the rich ability of the star of "Morning Glory," "Spitfire," and the Alcott story which was just recently voted one of 1934's ten best.

Excellent Cast

John Beal, a youthful stage actor who made his screen debut in "Another Language," with Helen Hayes, is superb as Gavin Dishart, the minister whom Babbie loves. Alan Hale scores as the temperamental ruffian, Rob Dow, who grows to respect and love the minister who befriends him. The grand actor Frank Conroy plays Lord Rintoul, Babbie's guardian, and others in the splendid cast include Beryl Mercer, Donald Crisp, Andy Clyde, Billy Watson, Lumsden Hare, Mary Gordon, Herbert Bundon and Reginald Hare.

"The Little Minister" has been a success from the time it was written in 1891, on to its great success as a stage play starring Maude Adams for many years, then its silent screen presentations, first starring Alice Calhoun and later Betty Compson.

and now the talkie with "Katharine Hepburn."

Good Scenes
The picture gives many views of the exquisitely intimate village of Thruma, Barrie's birthplace. It is shown in contrast with the beautiful Rintoul castle, which was built after the style of the old Norman castles. In the village are seen the homes of the poor weavers, the town hall, Rob Dow's blacksmith shop, old Nannie's humble cottage, the manse of the little minister, the kirk and the shops—just as we visualized as we read the book.

Against this vivid and picturesque background comes Miss Hepburn as Babbie—loving deeply, hating bitterly, a glittering figure in the humdrum life of the little Scotch village. Then, in simple, human style, is told the beloved story of the romance of the vivacious gypsy girl and the reticent young clergyman.

Double Bill

A double bill that should prove very interesting and entertaining is scheduled for the State Tuesday and Wednesday. The first feature is entitled "Behold My Wife," co-starring Sylvia Sydney and Gene Raymond, and tells of the love of an Indian girl for a rich New Yorker. The second is a comedy featuring Joan Blondell, Hugh Herbert, Glenda Farrell, Robert Armstrong and Osgood Perkins. It is called "Kansas City Princess," and a diverting mélange of hilarious nonsense, tailored to fit the well-established comedy talents of the mentioned stars.

Sport Chatter

Bits of News From The World Of Athletics

Jimmy Aiken, a hard-boiled guy with a husky voice and a big heart, who coached the state championship Canton McKinley High school football team last fall, was embarrased beyond words recently when an Akron newspaper quoted him as saying he had accepted the Kent State college coaching position and already had selected an assistant.

It is the truth that Aiken has been a leading candidate for the Kent State job. But in view of the secrecy with which the college officials have guarded the appointment of a successor to Joe Bega, any statement from Aiken was premature to say the least.

After the story was published, Aiken telephoned Dr. J. O. Engleman, Kent State president, and expressed regret over its publication. He claimed to have been misquoted.

Aiken may not have all the qualities needed to make him an ideal football coach, but he has those it takes to turn out good teams. He is a clever football tactician, a stern teacher of fundamentals, and has the even more important faculty for keying up his teams to play their best game.

Players coached by Aiken often take the field with tears streaming from their eyes and fire figuratively shooting from their nostrils.

A player on one of Aiken's teams once was asked if his coach had given the team a "die for dear old Rutgers" talk before an important game.

"Hell, no," the player replied. "He told us to go out and win for HIM if we didn't feel like winning for the school."

Aiken also has been considered for the coaching position at University of Toledo, where Jim Nicholson is on his way out. There is a warm spot in Aiken's heart for Toledo, where he coached for several years at Scott High.

Another fact about Aiken, not generally known, is that he had ambitions to become an attorney and to make the coaching profession a sideline.

Plans were underway today for the organization of an eight-team Class D baseball circuit in Ohio.

According to Harry W. Smith, Columbus, former secretary of the Central league teams have entered Mansfield, New Philadelphia, Tiffin, Warren, Coshocton, Alliance, Massillon, Newark, Canton, New Philadelphia and East Liverpool.

With another meeting scheduled for Jan. 27, Smith said the circuit would be similar to the old Ohio state league.

Those attending a meeting yesterday at Mansfield were George Trautman, president of the Columbus club of the American association; Joe Carr, Columbus; H. H. Henry, Mansfield; R. M. Nash, Marion; W. R. Clark, New Philadelphia; C. R. Leetone, Tiffin; M. A. Coyle, Canton; Dick Johns, Coshocton, and Cy Butler of Alliance.

The Brooklyn Dodgers, who started far behind the New York Giants in their race to get all their players signed up for the 1935 season, have received their first signed contract. It came from Nick Tromark, former Manhattan college player.

County Amateur Boxing Tournament This Week

East Liverpool To Be Scene of Fistic Show, Sponsored by American Legion, On Wednesday and Friday Nights

An amateur boxing tournament in Columbiana county sponsored by the American Legion will be held in the Winland auditorium at East Liverpool on Wednesday and Friday nights of this week.

Matchmaker Tom McDonough and George Grafton, who are supervising the entries, revealed today that the simon-pure mitt slingers are still filling for the big show. Twenty-eight entrants were on hand Saturday and Grafton expects the total to remain about 30 by the time the deadline is reached.

Out-of-town scrappers announcing their intentions of competing Saturday. Among them were two Wellsville entries, Joseph Dilestia and John Hand. The former is a 125-pounder, while Hand battles in the 112-pound division.

From Chester, Pa., came William Schroeder, 147, and Charles Mackall, a light heavy tipping the scales at 167. William Cooper, a 150-pound battler from Clinton, Pa., also sent in his entry.

Fighters may file their entry blanks with McDonough at the Grand billiard parlor or with Mr. Grafton.

Officials for the legion attractions were announced today.

Kenny Davis and Freddy Edwards, both former Liverpool pugilists will referee the contests.

Edwards, once a promising young welterweight, is immensely popular with the mitt fans, although his experience as a referee is limited.

The judges will be Alex Sweeney, Earl "Punch" Welsh and Police Chief Hugh McDermott of the Potter city. The judges have a real task on their hands in these amateur bouts for no draw decisions can be rendered.

Johnny Coleman of Liverpool will do the introducing.

Fight duets are priced at 50 cents for general admission and 75 cents for ringside reserved seats.

Ground-work For Two Important Bouts Is Laid

(By Associated Press) NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—The ground-work for two important boxing matches later in the season will be laid this week at Philadelphia and New York.

Vince Dundee of New York, former middleweight champion, boxes Paul Pirrone of Cleveland ten rounds at Philadelphia tonight.

Madison Square Garden hopes to pair the winner against Babe Risko, Syracuse belter who recently stopped Teddy Yarosz, kingpin of the division in an overweight bout.

On Friday in the garden, Bob Olin, light heavyweight champion, tangles with John Henry Lewis, Phoenix, Ariz., Negro contender in a non-titular ten rounder. Should Lewis win or make an impressive showing, efforts will be made to rematch him with Olin in a 15-round championship match.

CHURCH LEAGUE TEAMS ACTIVE

Methodists Take Presbyterians; Winona Drubs Christians

The Methodists and Presbyterians battled in a church league fracas Saturday at the Memorial building, the M. E.'s coping the game by a 16 to 14 point margin. Kerr led the winners with six points while Crouch was far ahead for the Presby five with nine marks.

The Winona M. E.'s were walloped by the Christians 21 to 9 in another league battle. Schaffer had six points for the winners while the highest for the losers was Miligan with four.

Another one-sided game was that between the manuels and the Friends church leaguers which the Friends took easily, 16-5. Allen with nine points and Kimes with five were the leaders for the Friends, Kaiser and Daniels scored their teams only points.

Columbian cagers scored 10 points, better than the Trinity flippers to win, 23-13. Handlick had nine marks for the winners. Marino sank seven for Trinity.

Weary Quakers Lose To Dover, 24-22, In 2nd Gruelling Fight

Coach Brown's Boys Take Early Lead, But Become Listless As Doverites Find Hoop; Late Rally Falls Short by One Basket

(Special to The News.)

DOVER, Jan. 14.—Salem High school's basketball stalwarts, tired and worn from their terrific but victorious encounter at East Liverpool Friday night, bumped up against a flashy and powerful quintet in Dover here Saturday night and were shaded 24-22 after a battle that provided Dover fans with more excitement than they've had in many a day.

The game ended in a wild frenzy and was practically a duplication of the Liverpool-Salem game the night before. Salem came within one basket of forcing the traces into overtime. Both teams fought savagely for the ball in the closing minutes of play, but neither team was able to score and the Dover lads held their advantage to win.

Coach Herb Brown's Quakers, trailing since the second quarter when they seemed listless and bewildered, recovered too late in the closing stanza.

A rest period—at least light practice with foul shooting as the aim for improvement, is the prescription of Brown this week. On Friday night the Quakers travel to Alliance to meet the Aviators in what will prove another encounter of titanic proportions.

Although they snatched a six-point lead in the first quarter, the Salem cagers were unable to retain it. Dover, after blanking them in the second quarter, garnered a nine-point lead by half time. The Crimson started off listlessly, unable to find the hoop, but once they found it, Fox, Cuneo and Rimer made good their shots.

Salem again gained momentum in the fourth quarter and led by Pukalski, made buckets from all angles. Had Palmer made a pot shot at the final gun, the game would have gone into an overtime period. Pukalski scored seven points for the Salem team, leading the scoring.

CONGRESS WILL FACE BIG JOBS

Social Security, Pensions, Bonus Problems to Be Debated

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—Congress will come face to face with its largest task this week, notably the problem of social security which President Roosevelt plans to attack in a special message expected to go to Capitol hill within two or three days.

Deluged with demands for the Townsend plan for $200 a month pensions to everyone over 60, legislators were looking forward particularly to hearing the white house ideas on old age security.

Pension Plan in Doubt
One report in congressional circles—unconfirmed at the white house—was that a monthly pension of $43 for eligible old folk might be the administration's answer to the drive for the Townsend plan. Another belief, voiced with equal fervor, was that the figure would be $30.

The week will see two old controversies renewed. On Wednesday, the house ways and means committee will meet to decide how fast it shall handle the proposal to pay the $2,300,000,000 soldiers' bonus.

Friends and foes of the World Court were clearing their throats for oratory on the proposal to have the United States enter it. The debate is expected to start in the senate tomorrow or Wednesday.

Will Divide Cost

In view of this, some legislators are known to be anxious about the consequences of supporting the administration's much more conservative plan. While the size of pensions the administration will seek has not been confirmed from official sources it is reported authoritatively that the cost will be divided between the federal and state governments, probably on a 50-50 basis.

Outlines of the administration's plan for unemployment insurance were more definite, with indications

Inches Apart but Barrier High!

This intimate glimpse in the courtroom at Flemington, N. J., shows Bruno Richard Hauptmann, on trial for the Lindbergh baby murder, conversing with his wife (back to camera) during a short recess. Only inches separate them, but the law has set up a barrier that cannot be lowered except in the event Hauptmann is acquitted of this and other charges facing him.

it would conform closely to the general plan embodied in the Wagner-Lewis bill of last session.

This proposed a federal payroll tax to be paid by all employers of more than 10 wage earners. From this payment, employers could deduct whatever they paid to an approved state insurance fund.

The senate planned to listen today to a speech by Senator Nye (R., N. D.) seeking $100,000 more to press his munitions investigation. The house calendar was clear.

WIVES FIGURE TAX PROBLEMS

Polish Up Arithmetic As New State Sales Tax Looms

Sales of cigarettes, brewers' wort and malt, upon which a tax is imposed by state law, are not taxable.

Sales of spirituous liquor by the department of liquor control are not subject to the tax, but when such sales are made by holders of permits issued by the department, the tax applies. Wine is not subject to the tax.

Interstate Sales Exempt
Sales in interstate commerce are exempt. If a coal dealer in Cincinnati should sell five tons to a resident of Covington, Ky., no tax would be collected.

The state and its political subdivisions do not have to pay the tax.

Sales by a farmer are not subject to the tax if the produce is raised on his farm.

If a man buys an automobile priced at $1,500, but is allowed $400 for his old car, he still must pay a tax computed on the $1,500.

Business as engaged in the renting of books, clothing, furniture, typewriters, office supplies, radios, cameras and the like are "making sales," the regulations say, within the meaning of the act, and must be subject to the "rental price" if all items "rented or sold" by them.
